GEORGIAN LANDSCAPE DESIGN LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

ATLANTA - June 19, 2007 --- Georgian Landscape Design (GLD) launched its new Web site today in response to the requests of many prospective clients who wanted more insight into some of the work the company has recently completed.

“It was time for a new site with the continuing growth of the business. We needed a new look, needed to add more images to the Gallery and expand the information available to our clients and that’s just what we’ve got. After seeing the business develop over the past year, the new Web site truly reflects the company’s mission, our passion for creating beautiful and unique landscapes and our commitment to absolutely thrilling our clients with the results,” said Ed Szczesniak, company designer and owner.

Having recently moved to Suwanee, Ga., GLD has kept very busy with new clients and new projects, as well as expanding the work it has done for previous clients. Szczesniak started the company last year after a lifelong dream of designing and landscaping finally lured him away from the corporate life where he had spent the last 30 years. To date every single landscape project has been obtained via client referrals, a real testament to the fact that GLD truly does make its clients “love the scene they’re in.”

“I could not be happier about the progress of our young company, and the new site better reflects our work and provides a deeper view of the types of projects that we undertake,” said Szczesniak.

The new Web site will feature much of the same content from the previous site with additions such as a news and features section, an expanded gallery and an easier way to contact GLD and provide feedback. A quarterly newsletter is also planned for release in the fall of '07 which will provide GLD’s clients with landscape tips, techniques, seasonal color ideas, and feature some of the latest projects the firm is engaged in.
